

After the sermon people were asked if they would like to respond to the following question:

As a church community, how can we grow in a 'theology of weakness' – of seeing Christ's power in our weaknesses? What ideas do you have?

The suggestions were as follows:

'When we have a problem which is attacking our lives or faith have the guts to ask another Christian to pray for us over a 90 day period in order to help heal this bad habit.'

'Join a growth group: build trust, pray for each other and strengthen each other.'

'Getting out of our comfort zones e.g. Worship leaders try preaching. Preachers try leading worship, etc.'

Are there any more suggestions? We'd love to hear them - do send them in!
